

< 2023 [19th News] Conclusion of MOU with National University of Singapore> (Posted on November 1, 2023)

University of Occupational and Environmental Health, Japan (UOEH) signed a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) and an Addendum with National University of Singapore (NUS), one of the prestigious universities of Asia in August. The signed MOU is effective from August 1.

This MOU and Addendum was concluded with NUS, acting through its Saw Swee Hock School of Public Health.

UOEH had developed continuous relationship between NUS in the field of Occupational Medicine including the Teleconference "International Environmental and Occupational Health" (IEOH) Seminar.

Upon conclusion of MOU, it is expected to be deepen further the relationship between both universities and extending cooperation in the areas of joint research and exchanges of students, residents of occupational medicine and faculty in future.

Prof. Yoshiya Tanaka, Director of International Center, and President Yoichi Ueta of UOEH with signed MOU and Addendum